APA Database Update
-- Important information for subscribers to PsycBOOKS®

NEW!
No more embargo on current titles

✔ PsycBOOKS now includes access to new APA-published scholarly and professional books as they are published (33 titles in 2014)

NEW!
All volumes of the APA Handbooks in Psychology reference series are now included, covering a wide array of disciplines:

- Addiction
- Behavior Analysis
- Counseling Psychology
- Educational Psychology
- Ethics in Psychology
- Industrial and Organizational Psychology
- Multicultural Psychology
- Personality and Social Psychology
- Psychology, Religion, and Spirituality
- Research Methods in Psychology
- Sexuality and Psychology
- Testing and Assessment in Psychology

The content included in PsycBOOKS is being expanded, and all customers will benefit. Existing customers will automatically gain access to the expanded content beginning in July 2014.

Going forward, PsycBOOKS will no longer maintain an embargo on newly published material. APA-published scholarly and professional books will be added to the database upon their release, avoiding the previous 12-month waiting period. In addition, all of the volumes that are currently part of the APA Handbooks in Psychology® Series will be added to PsycBOOKS as well. New Handbooks in this series will also be added as they are released.

What does this mean for PsycBOOKS subscribers?
With these additions, PsycBOOKS becomes the most current and comprehensive resource for APA-published book content. PsycBOOKS is the single, and only, resource for complete coverage of scholarly and professional books published by APA. In addition, PsycBOOKS supplements the APA-published content with an extensive backfile of classic, historical, and out-of-print works, making it indispensable for any library serving psychology, mental health, and behavioral science research.
1. What new content has been added?
   - The current 12-month embargo has been removed – all new APA-published scholarly and professional books will be added to the database as they are released
   - APA Handbooks in Psychology – all currently available volumes, along with future releases will be added as they are released

2. When will these books be available in PsycBOOKS?
   - The new content will begin to be added to PsycBOOKS in July 2014

3. My institution currently subscribes to PsycBOOKS, do we need to do anything to gain access to the new content?
   - No, all of the new content will be incorporated into your existing PsycBOOKS access, and will be discoverable immediately

4. My institution subscribes to PsycBOOKS through a vendor platform, not through APA PsycNET®. Do we get this new content too?
   - Yes, this new content is included with every subscription to PsycBOOKS, regardless of platform.

5. My institution subscribes to PsycBOOKS and has previously purchased one or more of the APA Handbooks in Psychology separately. What does this change mean for us?
   - Your institution retains ownership rights for the content they have previously purchased, and going forward will have access to any new releases to the APA Handbooks in Psychology Series that are added as part of your PsycBOOKS subscription. APA Handbooks in Psychology content can be purchased separately, if ownership is desired.

6. My institution subscribes to PsycBOOKS and has previously purchased one or more APA Books E-Collections separately. What does this change mean for us?
   - Your institution retains ownership rights for the APA Books E-Collections content they have previously purchased. They will also own the copyright year content that matches their current subscription year that is added within their subscription year(s) for PsycBOOKS. Additional copyright years can be purchased separately if ownership is desired.

7. What is the archiving policy for PsycBOOKS?
   - PsycBOOKS subscribers retain ownership rights for all new APA-published scholarly and professional books added to the database, for which the copyright year matches the subscription year. APA Handbooks in Psychology and classic and historic book additions are excluded from the ownership clause of the archiving policy.
