workday which the planters forced on them despite a so-called Black Code hypocritical legislation. The Black Code treated the slaves like furniture, and then deprived them of their humanity. And while the French Antilles they had taffia, the law was different from colony to colony, and in some even that them.

Tato Quinones There were strict Spanish prohibitions
[non-English narration]

Tato Quinones Against the sale of rum to Blacks in certain taverns or bars excited violence and rebellion.
[sil.]

The sugar industry which gave birth to rum made the settlers rich. Robin was shipwrecked planned to make his fortune in sugar. "Observing the planters" and the ease with which they made their fortunes "I determined to get a permit", to settle in that country and become a planter like the others."
