Safety Health and Environment (SH&E)

Increasing volumes of Commonwealth and State legislation, Codes of Practice and Standards (AS/NZ:4801, ISO 14001, OHSAS18001), coupled with more proactive authorities and greater community expectations have driven organisations to focus on understanding their safety, health and environment (SH&E) related risks, responsibilities and obligations and to manage them most effectively.

SH&E Monitor

SAI Global’s SH&E Monitor is a unique and comprehensive regulatory tracking and update service that helps you address the gap that exists between understanding regulation and applying it effectively in the workplace. Addressing all major safety, health and environment issues in Australia and New Zealand, SH&E Monitor focuses on the impacts of regulatory change to specific business processes and provides guidance on how to apply the change as it impacts the operational areas of your business.

SH&E Monitor can be easily deployed across an organisation and gives individual staff the power to customise the service based on their specific roles and responsibilities. Users can define their own individual profile, choosing to receive information about any or all of the 140+ business processes in any or all of the 10 jurisdictions covered by the service.

SAI Global’s SH&E Monitor is the only dedicated service which provides managers with weekly email updates of changes in the SH&E regulatory environment, in plain English summaries, that outline the key impacts of change on business processes as well as providing direct links to the source regulatory documents including Acts, Regulations, Statutory Codes of Practice and policies, Australian, NZ and International Standards, Guidance Notes and publications.

SAI Global’s consultants will also work with you to validate your SH&E programs against a set of obligations registers or guidelines developed by industry experts and to establish a process that enables you to maintain SH&E compliance.

The Safety, Health and Environment (SH&E) Obligations Registers are designed to assist compliance with the applicable legislative requirements in the jurisdictions relevant to an individual client’s business operations throughout Australia and New Zealand.

The SH&E Obligations Registers are based on the same 140+ Business Processes as those in the SH&E Monitor and can be mapped wherever possible to internal processes that align to the operational aspects of your various work sites.

Like the SH&E Monitor, each Obligations Register covers by individual jurisdictions all relevant Acts and Regulations, and identifies all relevant Standards Statutory Codes of Practice, Policies and Orders, Guidance Notes and other Publications which may impact on your SH&E compliance obligations.

Alternatively, SAI Global offers the SH&E Guidelines. Developed by Management Systems Australia and used by leading companies since 1994, the Guidelines also provide a business process based view of all major existing SH&E legislation and regulation, across all Australian and New Zealand jurisdictions.

The Guidelines can be customised to fit a client’s specific requirements with only the guidelines, requirements and reference material that are applicable to the client incorporated.

The SH&E Monitor service is packaged with the SH&E Guidelines and Registers to provide ongoing updates when requirements change and ensure that you are positioned to ensure ongoing SH&E compliance.

For more information, or to register for a free trial of the SH&E Monitor, please visit www.saiglobal.com/compliance/freetrialregistration or call 1300 555 595
