A Special Presentation for CAUL
Council of Australian University Librarians
Mary Ann Liebert, Inc., founded in 1980, is renowned for the establishment of authoritative publications in the most exciting and promising areas of biomedical research, biotechnology, clinical medicine and surgery, law, and science.
A family-owned company, directed by a real person with convictions

“I care passionately about medical research and the promise that it holds for health and humanity. I derive great joy out of knowing that as the result of something that has been published in one of our journals, new applications of research and therapeutic applications can cure or treat diseases.”

from an interview in Serials Review
A Passion for Medicine

Liebert's passion for medicine is intensely personal. Her late father, LeRoy, suffered from Parkinson's disease, a neurological affliction that has struck boxer Muhammad Ali and actor Michael J. Fox. While majoring in journalism at Northwestern University, Liebert interned at the American Medical Association, where she spent her days scouring literature looking for a cure for her dad. "I didn't find it, but it ignited my interest in medicine," she says.

Mary Ann Liebert, Inc. Launches New Journal on Sustainability

New Rochelle, NY, April 26, 2007-- Sustainability: Research and Practice brings together researchers, educators, and administrators in higher education, corporate officers and administrators who are assuming sustainability responsibilities, policymakers, economists, technologists, and executives at all levels of business who have a commitment to and the responsibility for advancing efforts toward the preservation and sustainability of global resources.

The goal of sustainability is development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. These goals necessitate a society that is environmentally viable, economically robust, and socially just and equitable.

Within its purview the new Journal will include a focus on the environment, global warming and climate change; and energy, ecological, and resource conservation initiatives to ensure a sustainable future, as well as societal considerations in a global context.
Our Journals have International Diversity in the make-up of Editors, Editorial Board Members and Contributing Authors including over editorial board members from Australia & New Zealand.
