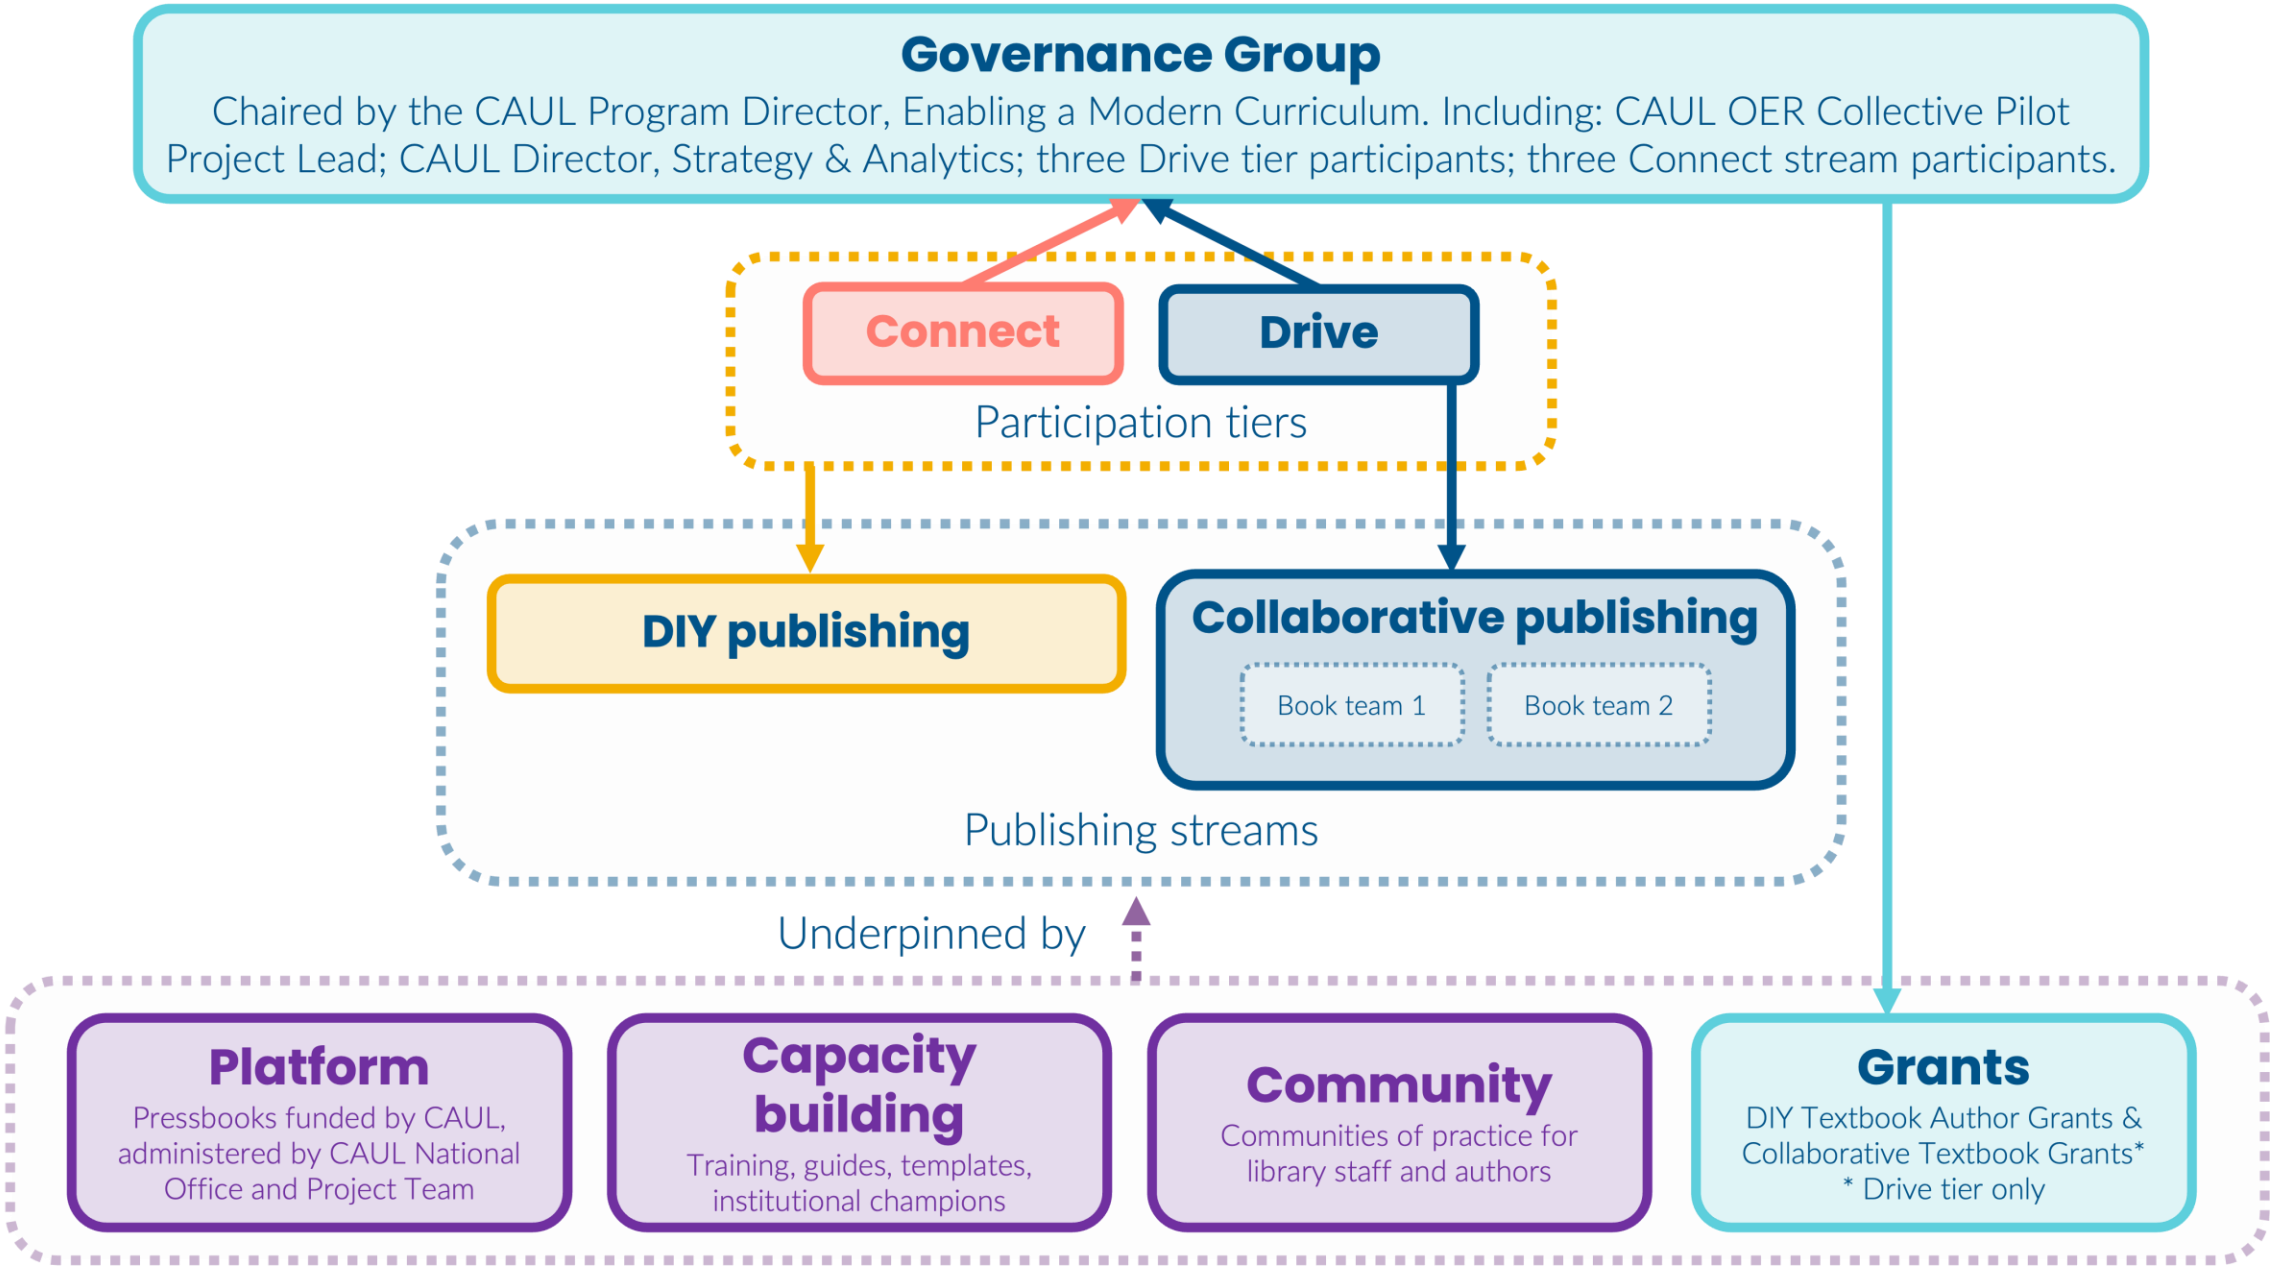
CAUL OER Collective Pilot Project

Objectives

1. Build infrastructure, capacity and achieve tangible outcomes to move the OER agenda forward at a national level.
2. Allow member institutions to publish their own textbooks in disciplines of their choosing.
3. Facilitate collaborative authoring and publishing of open textbooks in targeted priority disciplines, with a preference for the inclusion of local and/or indigenous content.

The Collective will

- Support member institutions at various stages of development in terms of open textbook adoption, adaptation and creation.
- Draw on the strength of networks within the CAUL membership to encourage cross-institutional collaboration on open textbooks and facilitate knowledge sharing.



Governance Group
Chaired by the CAUL Program Director, Enabling a Modern Curriculum. Including: CAUL OER Collective Pilot Project Lead; CAUL Director, Strategy & Analytics; three Drive tier participants; three Connect stream participants.

Community – Authors Partnering with the Library

"That there are possibilities to develop things, that there are people in this university who will want to support those things, that there is an opportunity in this university to put money towards supporting those things - that is the greatest thing, because it encourages further work, it encourages further research, and it encourages the people working on the ground to communicate more with other people".
(Partridge, Stagg and Power, 2016)

Capacity Building

"A unique opportunity to open a conversation in the sector that includes academics, professional bodies, librarians working in openness, and also users from the libraries..... " (Santos-Hermosa 2022)

Capacity Building

"Openness is fostered as part of the core digital skills a librarian should have, so they are not only capable of providing support in opening up knowledge, but in contributing to a fair knowledge ecosystem for the society, supporting peers, educators, and researchers in co-creating, generating, reusing, and sharing knowledge, thereby facilitating access beyond the walls of their own library and thus democratising information" (Santos-Hermosa 2022)
